

ILLINOIS
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

Reflections on Prison Teaching

Education Justice Project

The University of Illinois offers on-site for-credit courses in a range of disciplines each semester at Danville Correctional Center, a men's state prison about thirty miles east of campus. Faculty and graduate students who have taught in the program share some of their experiences, and explain how teaching in a prison has made them more effective instructors on campus.

The Education Justice Project will be accepting applications from prospective course instructors and prison tutors throughout the month of February.

Jenni Lieberman, English

D. Fairchild Ruggles, Landscape Architecture

Rob Scott, Education Policy Studies

WEDNESDAY February 10 | 5 - 7pm
IPRH Lecture Hall | 805 W. Pennsylvania Ave | Urbana
light reception to follow

Co-sponsored by the Education Justice Project and the Illinois Program for Research in the Humanities